While Cambodian government officials seeking political survival were trying to arrange a return of exiled Prince Norodom Sihanouk, this young Cambodian soldier carried three M-16 rifles and his infant son to a forward command post.

Top-ranking Cambodians want U.S. to oust Lon Nol

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Some high-ranking members of the Phnom Penh government recently requested the Nixon administration to arrange for the removal of President Lon Nol and the immediate return of exiled Prince Norodom Sihanouk, well-informed sources reported Sunday.

If Washington agrees, the sources said, presidential adviser Henry Kissinger will carry the plan to Chinese leaders during his upcoming visit to Peking.

Sihanouk concurrently will be approached by Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., and any prior conditions he may wish to impose will be relayed to the Phnom Penh regime before the plan is put into action.

Basic to the plan is the prior removal of Cambodian strongman Marshal Lon Nol and key members of his entourage from the country by the Americans.

"The Americans will probably have to use force to get Lon Nol to leave but face can be saved on both sides if he is taken to a hospital in the United States for treatment," one high-level Cambodian said. Lon Nol is crippled from a stroke.

Within moments of Lon Nol's departure, the sources said, the remaining members of the Phnom Penh government will send a telegram to Sihanouk at his Peking-based government-in-exile urging him to return immediately to Cambodia to again take up the reins of power.

"Samdech Euv (Sihanouk) is the only man who can save Cambodia from further bloodshed and possible destruction," said one of the men active in the March 18, 1970, coup which overthrew Sihanouk.

"His return will most certainly mean my death but Cambodia will again have a chance to live and that is what we all always wanted," he continued.

"Now it is up to the Americans. If Nixon insists upon continuing his support of Lon Nol, if Nixon insists that Lon Nol must remain, then we are all lost."

According to intelligence sources both within the Phnom Penh government and the foreign diplomatic corps, the immediate return of Sihanouk is the only move that can possibly keep Cambodia from turning into a totalitarian Communist state.

"Sihanouk is no Communist. He is first and foremost a nationalist," said one Cambodian in the upper echelons of the regime.

Three killed, 14 injured on Pocono highways

By GARY BARANIK
Pocono Record Reporter
STROUDSBURG — Three persons were killed and 14 others injured in auto accidents in the Poconos over the weekend.

Gary M. Stettler, 22, Bartonsville, was killed early Saturday when he lost control of his car while passing a pick-up truck on Rte. 611 slamming head-on into a tractor-trailer.

Stettler was pronounced dead at the scene at 1:15 a.m. by Monroe County Coroner Daniel Warner who attributed death to a fractured skull.

State police at Stroudsburg said Stettler was traveling north on a three-lane section of highway when he attempted to pass the truck operated by James Serfass, 21, Mount Pocono.

Police said the right wheels of Stettler's car struck the rear wheels of the pick-up causing the car to spin out of control.

Stettler's car crossed into the northbound lane where it struck the rig operated by Victor Bell, 50, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Neither of the drivers were injured and no one was charged.

A Schuylkill Haven R.D. 1 woman was killed and her husband and daughter critically injured in a two-car accident Sunday afternoon on Rte. 191, four miles north of Honesdale.

Mrs. Janice R. Kulikosky, 33, was pronounced dead at the scene by Wayne County Coroner Robert Jennings at 1:10 p.m. Death was attributed to a fractured skull and multiple internal injuries.

Her husband, Cpl. Joseph A. Kulikosky of the state police at Schuylkill Haven and daughter, Ruth, two, were both listed in guarded condition Sunday night at the Wayne Memorial Hospital in Honesdale.

State police at Honesdale said Ronald W. Barnes, 20, Hancock, N.Y., was driving south on Rte. 191 at an apparent high rate of speed when he lost control while negotiating a left curve.

Police said the Barnes' car crossed into the northbound lane where it struck the Kulikosky car. The Barnes' car then rolled over, going down an embankment.

Barnes was listed in satisfactory condition at Wayne Memorial Hospital. All of the injured were removed by the Hessler Ambulance of Honesdale.

Jennings said he will hold a coroner's inquest at a later date. He said the road was dry at the time of the accident.

Cpl. Frank Booths and Trooper Harry Light are continuing their investigation with charges pending.

In the other fatality, Mrs. Marie Gunmore LaPoint, 72, of 1426 Westside Ave., Honesdale, was killed Friday afternoon at Main and 15th Street in Honesdale when she was struck by a car.

Honesdale Borough police said Mrs. LaPoint was struck by a car operated by Norman Mosher, 68, Stalker, Wayne County.

Dr. John J. Perrige, chief deputy Wayne County coroner ruled death as accidental resulting from acute shock due to multiple fractures and internal injuries.

Police said no charges will be filed against Mosher.

Julius H. Curry, 42, Pemberton, N.J., remained in critical condition Sunday night at the General Hospital of Monroe County with burns suffered when his milk tank truck caught fire Friday afternoon.

State police at Easton said Curry was traveling south on Rte. 33 near Wind Gap when he lost control of the truck. It ran off the roadway hitting an embankment where it caught fire.

In other accidents: Mark Bushnelli, 16, East Stroudsburg R.D. 1, was listed in satisfactory condition Sunday when his car ran off Craig Meadow Road in Smithfield Township at 6:30 p.m. striking a tree and 20 feet of fence.

Six persons from Lansdale were treated and released at the General Hospital of Monroe County Sunday night when their car struck a tree on Rte. 402 in Marshalls Creek. They were assisted by the Marshalls Creek Rescue Squad.

Rooney M. Birkins, 18, Paramus, N.J., was in satisfactory condition at Wayne Memorial Hospital. His car crashed after he fell asleep behind the wheel on Rte. 507 early Sunday.

Lynn Yaroszevski, 17, Lehigh R.D. 1 and Randall Moyer, 21, Jamestown, were treated and released from the General Hospital of Monroe County from injuries suffered Saturday night when their motorcycle collided with a car on Rte. 209 in Gilbert.

Competitors outnumber spectators

Gocek race raises $3,000

By MAUREEN RUFE
Pocono Record Reporter
LONG POND — It might be the first time in history that the competitors at a race at Pocono International Raceway outnumbered the spectators.

(Related story, page 11)

So sparse was the crowd that turned out for the two-day, benefit Gocek Brothers Go-Kart Race for Life over the weekend that Dr. Joseph Mattioli, chief executive officer of the raceway, announced over the public address system that it was a "damn sad commentary" on the people of Monroe County that so few people showed up to support such a worthy cause.

The two-day benefit event, put on by the Pocono Karters Inc. for the Frank Gocek family of Reeders — three brothers suffer from acute kidney disease — drew a mere 500 spectators for the 17 classes of races run Saturday and Sunday.

More than 550 karts from throughout the nation and Canada showed up for the two-day event.

A local volunteer committee helping to put on the race had hopes of raising $20,000 for the Goceks. Only $3,000 was raised from the sale of tickets and programs and from straight donations.

A donation will be made to the family from the Pocono Karters, but there is no indication to date as to how much will be forthcoming. Despite the light crowd, the hearts of the drivers and pit crews went out to the Gocek brothers, so much so, that before the start of the Reed Heavy Class, driver Stu Syverson of Abington, Mass., said he would be racing especially for 18-year-old Chris, who received a kidney transplant operation from Hahnemann Hospital in Philadelphia in March.

Syverson won the event and in a special ceremony Sunday afternoon presented his first place trophy to Chris.

According to Pocono Karting President Robert Snyder, the trophy donation was especially commendable on the part of the New England Karting Assn., driver, because there are no purses awarded as prizes in any of the classes.

Syverson brought his kart all the way from Massachusetts in hopes of snagging a trophy and when he did, he gave it away to Chris.

Jim Gocek, 19, who is currently on kidney dialysis, helped to time the speeds of various karts during the races.

Matt, 14, the only Gocek son free of nephritis, sold programs for both days of racing.

Joe Gocek 19, who also suffers from kidney nephritis, had to be rushed to a Wilkes-Barre hospital Saturday afternoon so doctors there could unclog his shunt, the apparatus that connects a vein with an artery for home kidney dialysis.

He was unable to see any of the go-karts race.

A Gocek daughter, Margaret died of kidney failure three years ago.

Despite the number of spectators and the minimal amount of money raised for the boys, Frank Gocek said he was pleased by the volunteer efforts of all those who helped put on the special event for his family.

Immediately after Labor Day, Gocek will enter Hahnemann Hospital to give his son Jim one of his own kidneys.

Joe is still in desperate need of a transplant.

Phase 4 begins; prices to jump

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration's second wage-price freeze in two years ended at midnight Sunday, although economic conditions remained unchanged and even worsened in some cases.

As Phase IV begins, prices on most products except beef and petroleum are now free to rise within a complicated formula to be administered by the Cost of Living Council.

President Nixon began economic controls Aug. 15, 1971 with his first freeze, followed by controls in November, 1971 and a return to a relatively free market in January, 1973 that touched off rapid price increases inducing Nixon to reimpose a freeze June 13.

With the second freeze ended, most firms are expected to race to mark up prices. Macke Vending Co. raised some prices by a nickel last week and the Washington Star-News newspaper announced subscription rates would increase effective today.

Before the freeze the Treasury Department was paying about 8 per cent on money borrowed to run the government. The cost for borrowed money by the treasury surpassed 10 per cent Wednesday.

Home mortgage funds practically disappeared in states with 8 per cent usury ceilings during the two-month freeze.

Woman dying of cancer throws own farewell party

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI) — Cancer-ridden Ruth Hoffman, not sure she would last through the weekend until today, threw her own farewell party to "see and talk and touch" as many of her friends as possible. "I'm ready now. I have a date way up there with God," she said as family and friends — and strangers — packed into her hospital room Saturday evening. "Today is my happy day. I've learned the closer one lives to God, the happier one becomes as the end approaches."

"We all have to die," the 57-year-old woman said at Sequoia Hospital in this San Francisco Peninsula suburb.

More than 100 persons went to the eight-hour open house for punch, cookies and a piece of iced cake made by the hospital staff.

Scores signed a red-covered guest book. She took telephone calls from as far away as Greenville, S.C. Telegrams and vases of flowers came from all over.

One telegram from Omaha, Neb., read: "My doctors have told me I also will join you because of cancer. I have never seen you but I will as we know everything will be lovely where we're going. God bless. Al Forney."

Mrs. Hoffman's son, Don, 24, came from Grants Pass, Ore., for the party.

"At first we were reluctant about this party, but now we're glad," said her daughter, Linda Gage, 23, of nearby Sunnyvale. "She's just super."

Mrs. Hoffman cradled her grandson, Scott Gage, 5, while speaking to a caller from Reno, Nev.

Sylvanus Hoffman, her airline electrician husband, helped serve food. A nurse came quietly into the room to give her a pain-killing injection. Jan Gregory, until recently a hospital roommate came to say goodbye to the woman she said had kept up her spirits while she was feeling low.

Baker nixes early report

WASHINGTON — Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said in an interview published in U.S. News and World Report he would not sign an interim report on the first phase of the Watergate hearings if his colleagues on the Senate investigating committee decide to write one. "As a lawyer who practiced for 17 years, I think I should have been greatly displeased if I had a jury on my hands that tried to return a verdict before all the proof was in," Baker said. The Senator said no report should be issued until all witnesses have been heard.

Nicklaus new golf king

CLEVELAND — Thirty-three year-old Jack Nicklaus won the PGA Championship Sunday for the third time to become golf's all-time top winner of major events. Nicklaus, a millionaire several times over although his pro career spans but a dozen years, surpassed the legendary Bobby Jones with the 14th major championship of his career. (Details on page 12)

Airline incident self-defense

TEL AVIV — Israel defended its interception of an Arab airliner as a "self-defense" act. Having already admitted they were trying to kidnap Palestinian terrorists believed aboard the Beirut-to-Baghdad flight, the Israelis noted that France, Algeria and Libya had in the past forced down airliners and seized passengers. The UN Security Council is to debate the incident today. (Details on page 2)

She's a good egg

FINLEYVILLE — Nancy, a duck in this small Pennsylvania town, has become somewhat of a celebrity due to the fact she has laid more than 400 eggs in her three-year life. "The run-of-the-mill duck produces eggs during spring and early summer, and Nancy is kind of a non-stopper," noted the duck's owner, Mary Ann Beck. As a bonus, Nancy even occasionally lays double-yolk eggs.

Police blamed for ignoring slain boys' disappearance

HOUSTON (UPI) — Parents of two young boys, both believed to be among the 23 victims of a homosexual bachelor and his two teen-age apprentices, claim police ignored their sons' disappearance and branded at least seven other missing youths as runaways.

Police Chief Herman B. Short said he would answer the growing criticism of his department's handling of missing person cases at a news conference today.

Police have unearthed 23 bodies at three locations and the macabre search resumes today along a sand and salt grass beachfront 51 miles east of Houston. The two teen-agers involved in the bizarre case—Elmer Wayne Henley, 17, and David Brooks, 18—told police they buried six or more bodies along the High Island beach.

Only five bodies have been positively identified but police have a long list of missing teen-agers they now feel may be among the dead.

"You don't run away with nothing but a bathing suit and 80 cents," said Selma Winkle, whose 16-year-old son left his home two years ago with David Helligeist to go swimming. Both boys never returned.

"If all these children were reported missing in this (northwest Houston) area, we couldn't understand why they (the police) didn't do anything," Dorothy Helligeist said. Both women said talking to police about their son's cases was like "talking to a blank wall."

Police say seven of the persons believed to be victims lived in the Heights district of northwest Houston, home of the Winkle and Helligeist boys, and were acquainted with each other. Two others who lived there—Marty Ray Jones and Charles Gary Cobble—disappeared two weeks ago.

Kissinger doubts reports to put Sihanouk in power

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger said Sunday he had doubts about reports that high government officials in Phnom Penh have asked the United States to arrange Cambodian President Lon Nol's removal and Prince Norodom Sihanouk's return to power.

Kissinger, President Nixon's top assistant for national security, said the reports do not "seem to be true" when he was asked about them.

"I'm not familiar with anything like that," Kissinger told UPI in a telephone interview from his White House office. "I'm not familiar with any major new developments at this point.

Kissinger conferred with Nixon Saturday at the President's Camp David retreat in Maryland. The White House declined to reveal the subjects discussed.

Kissinger also said he knew of no new communications that Sihanouk might have sent to the Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield. It was reported Saturday that Sihanouk sent the Montana senator a cable saying the prime condition for peace in Cambodia was an end to all U.S. interference there.

"I'm in frequent contact with Sen. Mansfield," Kissinger said. "I have found the senator is always meticulous about keeping us informed. I mean that sincerely. We have not heard from Mansfield and if he had received such a cable, he would have called me."

As for when he would be making another trip to China, perhaps even to see Sihanouk who frequently is in Peking, Kissinger said: "I haven't got the date set. As soon as I have, we'll announce it."

As the United States prepared to end its bombing of Cambodia at midnight Tuesday, Kissinger said he could offer no indication of new progress toward a peace settlement with the Communists.

"I think the parties know what our position is," he said, explaining that he believes the Communists will first try to determine whether they can win a military victory before they agree to engage in meaningful peace negotiations.

Fall of Lon Nol regime predicted

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., predicted Sunday that Cambodian President Lon Nol's regime will fall and exiled Prince Norodom Sihanouk will return to power "in a relatively short time" after U.S. bombing ends Tuesday.

Symington, acting chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, also said he thought Sihanouk enjoys more public support than any other person or group in Cambodia but that a government headed by the prince could easily be toppled by the North Vietnamese.

"When the (Lon Nol) government falls, in my opinion in a relatively short time, Mr. Sihanouk will be in charge of the government of Cambodia," said Symington, a former secretary of the Air Force, when asked to forecast what will happen after the bombing stops.

Pentagon intelligence analysts say the Lon Nol regime stands about a 50-50 chance of surviving. Sihanouk, ousted by Lon Nol in 1970, predicted in a cable to UPI Saturday that his troops would occupy the capital of Phnom Penh in the "not to distant future."

"I would hope that we could form some kind of viable government, or rather not ourselves form it but see it formed in Cambodia," Symington said.

Symington, who visited Cambodia about 18 months ago, also was asked about a new report from Phnom Penh that some high-ranking government members have asked President Nixon to arrange for the removal of Lon Nol and the return of Sihanouk.

"Anything that we can do to get some form of peace to these people who have been harassed for so many years would be good," he replied.

Nixon-Agnew organizers needlessly cried poverty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republican National Chairman George Bush has learned the Nixon-Agnew campaign organization pleaded poverty after the 1968 elections when it had almost $2.5 million salted away, forcing the GOP National Committee to bail it out.

Bush also revealed in an interview that the GOP National Committee donated a large amount of seed money to the Nixon campaign organization last year to help get the President's re-election effort rolling — only to find out later that a surplus of nearly $1 million still was available from 1968.

The information, he said, shocked some Republicans who made their contributions after the 1968 campaign on the basis of the claimed deficit.

Bush said he is laying claim for the Republican National Committee to get any money that's left in the Committee for the Re-Election of the President (CRP) from the 1972 campaigns after all bills are paid and lawsuits resulting from the Watergate break-in are settled.

"I want to be right up at the head of the line," Bush said. "We've picked up every deficit for a campaign in the past and if there happens to be any surplus left after the vultures have descended on that money, I'd like to have it."

Last year, he said, the National Committee "paid into the CRP a substantial amount of money as a kind of donation to get it started."

"If they've got money left, we need the money," he said in a UPI "Washington Window" interview. "Let's get it back where it belongs."

Interception of airliner explained as self-defense

By United Press International
Israel defended Sunday the interception of an Arab passenger plane over Lebanon by Israeli warplanes as an act of "self-defense" against terrorism and said it was not the first country to carry out such a diversion of an aircraft.

The 2,000-member Guild of Air Pilots, terming the forcing of the airliner to an Israeli military base an "act of piracy," called for expulsion of Israel from the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO).

Dr. George Habash, leader of an extremist guerrilla organization, in an interview in Beirut, confirmed he was to board the Iraq-bound plane diverted by Israel but decided not to, saying:

"For Israeli military airplanes to come here to the Lebanon and take by force a civilian airplane and force it to land in Israel is the climax of terrorism."

He said the PFLP would not renew hijacking in the foreseeable future and denied Israeli charges his group was tied to the attack at Athens airport last Sunday.

In Norway last month, was buried Sunday. Two Israelis found in the home of an Israeli diplomat in Oslo are among those being held in connection with the murder.

In Copenhagen, an Israeli and a Jordanian stabbed each other to death during a quarrel outside a restaurant early Sunday, police said. Police said there were no immediate indications the fight was politically-connected.

The U.N. Security Council will meet on the incident at 3 p.m. EDT today in New York at the request of Lebanon.

An Israeli official said in Jerusalem that following contacts with American officials, "I have my sincere doubts that the United States will veto a censure motion against Israel."

An American veto last month defeated a council resolution urging Israeli withdrawal from Arab territories captured in the 1967 Middle East war.

In a background paper given to newsmen, Israel said that France in 1956, Algeria in 1967 and Libya in 1971 have ordered airliners in flight to land on their territory and removed passengers for political reasons.

Del Val farm fair shows record number of exhibits

MILFORD — The much-touted national food shortage seemed to be nothing but an unsavory rumor at the Delaware Valley Fair and Farm Show this weekend.

Choice vegetable specimens, tempting baked goods, and juicy canned foods made the crammed Raymondskill Valley Grange Hall look like a horn of plenty split wide open.

The fair, held for Pike County residents Saturday and Sunday, invited entries from seamstresses, handwork specialists, and flower gardeners also.

The Pike County fair is one of the smaller county fetes around. However, the 1973 version didn't lack for quality.

The number of exhibitors reached an all-time high, according to chairman Cynthia Van Lierde.

"I can't tell you how many are here," Mrs. Van Lierde said. "But we're more crowded than ever before."

Flower arrangements, often amazing in their creativity, surrounded a huge table laden with pies, cakes and cookies.

Miniature arrangements, modeled to the minutest detail on full-scale flower studies, brought astonished comment from many fairgoers squeezing through the aisles.

Handwork showed skill and originality. A first place crocheted shawl, rife with colorful flowers, was valued at $150. The ecological craft awarded first place was a flower study made from styrofoam egg cartons in varied colors.

A stand-out in the vegetable crowd was an almost 18-inch wide pumpkin submitted by Bernard Belli, Shohola Falls. The pumpkin was awarded a special merit ribbon, given only for exhibits of unusual merit or quality.

Five prize winners garnered top honors in their categories: Bernard Belli, Shohola Falls, for vegetables; Anne Wenzel, Pine Acre, Milford, for baked goods; Margaret Skinner, Milford, for flowers; Lucie Kerrigan, Matamoras for clothing; and Dolores Height, Mill Rift, for handwork.

Outdoors, bargain hunters searched for wares at the antique sale and flea market. Books were hawked for 89 cents, while antiques, such as an ancient gramophone, sold for discount prices.

Murder suspect jailed until hearing

EAST BANGOR — Michael F. Maloney, 21, of Pen Argyl, charged with last Wednesday's murder of a Bethlehem man is lodged in the Northampton County Jail in lieu of $50,000 bail to await a hearing this week before District Magistrate Elmo Frey of Nazareth.

Maloney is accused of the fatal stabbing of Guy Merritt Weaver, 21, of 2622 Lafayette Ave., Bethlehem in a gangfight at the Blaine Reimel Memorial Park in East Bangor.

The fight occurred between a gang known as the "Gypsies" from Bethlehem and a group of Slate Belt area men during the East Bangor

Fire Company's annual carnival.

Police said Maloney allegedly stabbed Weaver with a three-inch gravity knife during an argument over a hat. All of the participants in the scuffle scattered after the stabbing. The knife was recovered near the scene.

East Bangor Fire Chief Robert Davis said Weaver got into his van and drove a short distance before he got out and fell to the side of the road.

Weaver was pronounced dead on arrival at Easton Hospital. Northampton County Coroner Joseph Reichel attributed death to "massive hemorrhaging due to a single stab wound of the left chest."

Davis said an East Bangor patrolman and auxiliary police asked the men involved in the fight to leave the carnival prior to the stabbing incident. Both groups of men were reported drunk and disorderly.

Maloney was apprehended by a detachment of state troopers from the Easton barracks at 3 a.m. Thursday while he was sleeping in a parked car in front of his residence. He offered no resistance.

Judge Alfred Williams appointed Atty. Ronald Shipman of Pen Argyl and Joel Ziev of Easton to represent Maloney.

Maloney was arrested earlier this year for the alleged stabbing of Thomas Kluska of Bangor. He was confined in the county jail from March 23 to June 18 but was released when Kluska refused to press charges.

Witnesses at last Wednesday's fight said Kluska was involved in the incident.

Bangor police said Maloney was arrested for disorderly conduct July 2.

Monroe flood victims may claim tax relief

PHILADELPHIA — Special tax benefits are available to victims of flooding from June 27 to July 3 as a result of the declaration of Monroe County as a disaster area.

Taxpayers may deduct their flood damages on 1972 tax returns instead of waiting until next year, even if they have already filed their tax returns. Those who file on a fiscal year basis, may also take advantage of the relief on their 1972 forms.

Amended tax returns are necessary for claiming tax relief for 1972. They must be filed by March 15, 1974.

Copies of forms are available at local Internal Revenue Service offices of individual assistance centers. The nearest IRS office for Monroe County residents is the Wayne County Courthouse, Honesdale.

Disaster victims should have records of losses sustained. Non-business casualty loss deductions are limited to the amount over $100 for each casualty.

Tax forms will be handled more quickly if they are marked "disaster area loss" at the top of the amended form.

Three injured in crash

SNYDERSVILLE — A New Jersey woman and her two children were injured in a one car mishap on Rte. 33 Friday.

Christine B. Beaucage, 29, Somerville, N. J., was traveling south on Rte. 33 at 2:20 p.m. when her car went onto the median. Evidently trying to steer the vehicle back to the road, Mrs. Beaucage ran across the road and up an embankment and rolled her car over police said.

Mrs. Beaucage, her daughter, Carol, six, and her son, Robert, three, were treated for minor injuries and lacerations at the General Hospital of Monroe County and released.

Short circuit causes fire

BUSHKILL — A short circuit in a lamp caused an estimated $200 damage early Friday morning at the home of Paul Heller, Hollow Road, Bushkill.

About 20 men and three trucks from the Bushkill Fire Department responded to the alarm at 1 a.m. and extinguished the fire.

Snug in a bug

By MAUREEN RUFFE
Pocono Record Reporter
BRODHEADSVILLE — Thanks to the genius of some inventor, probably in Germany, I have finally been able to feel comfortable with a seat belt.

I always did know about the protection those binding ropes could afford, but it was such a nuisance to strap in and out at every stop.

I can remember having to unbuckle everytime I had to get something from the floor, the back seat or even to pull the gas lock handle to have fuel put in my bug.

The belts held you in — that was for sure, but once you were in, you were trapped and that was it. There was no allowance for free movement of any kind.

For the average driver, those restrictions might be just minor irritations, but for a reporter with a note pad, pocketbook, camera, film, purse and all the other paraphernalia, seat belts were a major stumbling block.

Getting film out of the glove compartment while being strapped in was impossible.

Then this week I bought a new bug and, of course, those ominous black belts were hanging there daring to get me strapped in again.

Well, it was new and what the heck, I buckled up. Was I in for a surprise! The belts moved back and forth when I had to reach for something and there were no complicated adjustments to move the buckle up and down for the proper fit.

"Is there something wrong with these?" I asked the salesman in disbelief. I can actually breathe and move with these belts. They expand when I do.

The people at the Volkswagen garage explained that the belts move freely back and forth to provide mobility for the driver, but when the driver is thrust forward quickly, as in an accident, the belts instantly lock in.

Forests caught in protection-exploitation squeeze

By DONALD R. LARRABEE
Washington Bureau

KETCHIKAN, ALASKA — Alaska's forests, potentially the most valuable resource next to the oil of the North Slope, are dying of old age, caught in the modern - day conflict between economic developers and environmental purists.

The U.S. Forest Service, which controls the timber in Alaska, sometimes makes more enemies than friends, trying to steer a middle ground in the public interest.

On the one hand, the loggers resent the heavy hand of Uncle Sam telling them how and where to cut. Five years ago, the Service had 35 landscape architects working with its rangers. Now it has six times as many men imposing aesthetic restrictions and irregular - shaped cuts on the timber operators. The new breed in the Forest Service is somewhat suspect, to say the least.

The ecologists, on the other hand, complain that the Service isn't tough enough on the polluters and the "clear cutters" who, they say, would wipe out entire sections of the forest, indiscriminately, if they had a free hand.

Bumper stickers all over the Alaska panhandle cry "Sierra Go Home", a reference to the inhibiting inroads made by the conservation-minded Sierra Club on the woods merchants. "Sierra" is clearly a pervasive force, not only in the forests but also in the Federal courts where at least one major cutting contract is tied up in test litigation.

Flying over large chunks of Southeastern Alaska's Tongass Forest, America's largest national forest, the observer sees the signs of deterioration and decay the loggers talk about — tall sticks of dead trees ("snags"), economically useless, unpleasant to the eye.

A mile away, he also looks down on the "destruction" the environmentalists talk about — big swaths of barren land where Sitka Spruce and Western Hemlock have been chopped wholesale from the slopes. These are eyesores of another variety although both seem less offensive at ground level.

The men who log at Thorne Bay, largest logging operation in Alaska and reachable only by air or water, form a complete community, 23rd largest in Alaska, with schools and other facilities provided by the Ketchikan

Pulp Company which has an 800,000-acre timber sale allotment from the Forest Service.

The loggers are convinced the great timber resource is drastically underutilized. They say they are being arbitrarily restrained from doing a job that nature — wind, fire, age — does less efficiently.

They compare Alaska's woods with those of the State of Maine where, in the last 300 years, they say, the woods have been cut as much as six times while the Tongass is largely allowed to grow older, stifling regeneration in the process. The reason "clear-cutting" is practiced in Alaska is that the Sitka spruce needs a great deal of light for regrowth. The foresters fear the hemlock would take over, otherwise.

One of the serious points of friction with the Forest Service is over how quickly to remove the old growth. The Service, which is presently limiting cuts to 160 acre plots, prefers to err on the conservative side.

But the principal problem, many foresters agree, is not so much the restrictions on cutting as it is getting the timber out of remote areas and marketed in the "lower 48" states. More roads are needed for access to the timber stands but this is not only unattractive but costly. The transportation and operational problems are incredible.

Furthermore, what forest is permitted to be cut has no ready lumber market in the United States, mostly because of the 65-year old Jones Act which requires cargo shipped between states to be in American vessels. There are practically no U. S. "bottoms" and Japan is buying most of Alaska's wood.

The U.S. does not get much of the pulp for making rayon and cellophane. A huge mill at Ward Cove near here handles about 600 tons of high-quality dissolving pulp a day. Ketchikan Pulp Company obligated itself to build the mill when it entered into its cutting contract with the Forest Service.

The woods operators up here see a lot of "state-side" politics they consider discriminatory. But they say the Jones Act will never be repealed so long as lawmakers from the Deep South control the key spots in Congress where they can effectively protect the timber resource of Dixie.

School boards ready to fight

Fulfilling that old axiom that, to every action there is an equal and opposite reaction, the Pennsylvania School Boards Assn. has come up with a battle plan for local school boards to sell the public on school building expenditures greater than that allowed by the so-called Taj Mahal bill.

The Taj Mahal bill, enacted last term, sets a limit on the cost of new school construction to prevent the building of over-elaborate "monuments" to the school board and-or its architect. The goal is efficiency and holding down skyrocketing school construction costs.

The school board association, however, takes a different view of new trends in school construction. Its feeling is that, far from being monuments to pride, expensive new schools are needed to take advantage of new educational concepts and equipment to provide the best instructional atmosphere possible for the state's students.

And so they have evolved a public relations campaign format calculated to sway the public and convince it to vote in favor of high-cost construction. The Taj Mahal bill provides that, if a proposed school exceeds the mandated cost limit, the issue must go before the public as a referendum question.

There's nothing wrong with that, of course. It doesn't seek to enlarge possible loopholes, but simply urges that school boards make the best case possible to sell the taxpayers on a proposed project. There are some public relations tricks that may seem a bit underhanded, but they are all tried and true marketing techniques proved long ago by the advertising world of Madison Avenue.

What it demands, though, is that the public remain alert to such techniques. Since the final decision on a new school (providing it exceeds fund limits) rests with the public, as it should, it is up to the public not to be brainwashed or hoodwinked by these flashy Madison Avenue tricks.

Look at the substance of any proposal, that's the idea. Get at the facts behind any campaign. Find out if the argument holds water. In other words, use the same care in buying a new school as you would in buying a new car or home.

To our way of thinking, the fact that school boards must either abide by legislated spending limits for new construction or haul all the facts out into the open for a public look is heartening. We much prefer that to the behind-the-doors secrecy that has always accompanied such decisions in the past.

Nixon won't quit

WHY NIXON WILL REMAIN PRESIDENT. There are three reasons:

1 — Nixon does not believe there is any valid basis for resignation and is convinced that the Watergate miasma will in time dissolve.

2 — The polls show that the great majority of adult Americans do not want him to resign.

3 — Most Democrats are against even trying impeachment because they think it better politically to keep him on the spot rather than to have to run against a fresh incumbent, Agnew, in 1976.

THE PUBLIC VERDICT — IS IT ILLOGICAL? The Gallup Poll shows that 71 per cent consider the President guilty to some degree of covering up the Watergate offenses and 82 per cent do not wish him to quit. If the great majority feels he is guilty, isn't it illogical not to want him to resign?

Not necessarily. The probable answer is that most voters do not want Watergate to be used as an excuse for a means to reverse the verdict of the 1972 election however much they hold Nixon responsible.

GOV. ROCKEFELLER AND WATERGATE. Here is one unexpected political fallout. A year ago there was every evidence that he would run for a fifth term as governor of New York as the best forum for seeking the 1976 GOP nomination.

Now Rocky is having second thoughts. His advisers are suggesting that in view of the gathering public disillusion with elected officials, it would be better for him to retire from politics for two years and emerge as the No. 1 private citizen.

TRADE WITH CHINA TAKES BIG LEAP. The increase exceeds all forecasts.

Two-way trade between the Chinese mainland and the United States amounted to only $5 million in 1971 and $92 million in 1972. This year it will rise to between $600 million and $700 million. At this stage the balance is highly favorable to the United States since American imports from China will not exceed $100 million while U.S. exports will run over a half-billion dollars.

There is one aspect of U.S. China "trade" which is wholly one-way. Last year, more than 17,000 immigrants came legally to America from the People's Republic of China and several thousand more entered illegally.

PRESIDENT THIEU IS WINNING THE ELECTIONS. If his critics in the United States were right, he should have been losing big because of his alleged unpopularity.

The opposite has been taking place in rural elections all across South Vietnam. Thieu's Democracy Party has won control of village councils in 44 provinces during the past two months.

Some losing candidates — three so far — seek recounts, but no widespread voting corruption is alleged.

The Viet Cong candidates were never in the running. President Thieu's party has been resoundingly successful. No wonder the Communists want to negotiate their way into the Saigon government rather than rely on free elections.

SIX NEW MEMBERS FOR THE UNITED NATIONS? West Germany and East Germany will be accepted as members this fall. South Korea and North Korea are next in line. Now Saigon is saying, in effect, "Why not North and South Vietnam?" The Soviets are reported to approve and, if so, the votes would be available in the General Assembly. Hanoi wants no part of such an arrangement. It wants to take over South Vietnam and then join the United Nations.

BRITISH POLITICAL SURPRISE. It's a big one and may put a new face on upcoming elections.

The Liberal Party is heading toward becoming the majority party. In the last eight parliamentary elections, the Liberals gained a total 6,000 votes more than Labor and 12,000 more than the Conservative Party of the Edward Heath government.

Stories Behind Words

By William Penfield

Buff

The word "buff" has at least two meanings. As a noun it denotes a color, and as a verb it means to polish. The word, in both meanings, is derived from "buffalo," a name originally given to the wild ox.

Leather made from the buffalo hide was a dull light yellow. Such a color was described as "buff," an abbreviation of "buff leather" — which, in turn, was a shortened form of "buffalo leather."

"Buff leather" was used to polish metal. Therefore, "buff" acquired another meaning — to rub or polish.

Four forgotten Cubans

WASHINGTON — All but forgotten in the Watergate wreckage are the four Cubans who were recruited to do the dirty work.

They thought they were serving their adopted country. Three of the four had been trained by the Central Intelligence Agency and had risked their lives on CIA missions.

Engenio Martinez, for instance, slipped into Cuba at least 300 times. He carried out his CIA orders so faithfully that he wouldn't jeopardize the missions to rescue his own parents. They eventually died in Cuba. Martinez would have been tortured to death if he had been caught. Yet he risked his life repeatedly for a CIA salary of $300 a month.

At the appeal of the wives, I interrupted a trip and flew back to Washington to speak to the four Cubans at the Rockville, Md., detention center. It was their first press interview.

We have no doubt after a long talk with the four Cubans that they were motivated by a misguided sense of patriotism. Their leader, Bernard Barker, went directly to the White House for their orders. In those impressive surroundings he was asked by his former CIA superior, E. Howard Hunt, to handle some surreptitious, national security missions.

Ellsberg's records Not until ten minutes before the Cuban break-in crew tried to steal Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatric records were they told the objective of their mission. They had been led to believe they were after a spy who had been delivering military secrets to the Soviet embassy.

Before they broke into Democratic party headquarters, they were told their main mission was to seek supposed evidence of secret communist contributions to the Democrats.

Their arrest caused international shock waves. But it was the White House plotters, not the four Cubans, who panicked.

A reported $460,000 was slipped to the Watergate defendants and their lawyers to buy their silence. Yet only a paltry few dollars filtered down to the Cubans — less than $14,000 to help them maintain their families, another $13,000 to their first attorney, Henry Rothblatt. Frank Sturgis, for example, collected a total of $2,500 in expenses. Virgilio Gonzalez and Eugenio Martinez received $1,600 to $1,800 apiece.

Despite all the hundreds of thousands in hush money, those at the tip were the first to break. The poorly paid Cubans, true to their CIA training, refused to talk.

They wound up behind bars while those who plotted the Watergate crimes remained free. Bob Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, even after their dismissal from the White House, were chauffeured to the grand jury in White House limousines. The four Cubans were brought in manacles by federal marshals.

Cut off

Long ago, the Cubans were completely cut off by the White House. In contrast, John Wilson, the attorney for Haldeman and Ehrlichman, conferred personally with the President. Haldeman was even permitted to use secret White House tapes to help prepare his defense — the same tapes that had been refused to the Watergate prosecutors and Senate investigators.

Barker, known to the others as Macho (He-Man), still talks about "loyalty" and "honor." His real estate business has been wiped out, the office furniture sold. His wife, Clara, works in the restaurant of a Miami hotel to make ends meet.

Sturgis is more bitter. He attributes the death of his mother to the Watergate reaction. He owes $3,000 in hospital and funeral bills. Some of his creditors are threatening to sue. His wife, Jan, is working to pay off the bills.

Martinez was divorced the day of his arrest. But he boasts of his 20-year-old stepson, Dominick, who took his name and is now a medal-winning parachutist in the Marines. Gonzalez also worries about his wife who lives alone with their 11-year-old daughter.

Cuban friends have been trying to raise a defense fund to help pay the bills. They have raised enough to distribute $750 to each family and to pay the attorney, Daniel Schultz, $5,500.

"We now know we did wrong," said Sturgis. "But as God is our judge, we thought at the time we were serving the country."

Footnote: The Cubans have also become the subject of malicious rumors, including one report that they helped plot the assassination of President Kennedy. As evidence a picture has been circulated allegedly showing Sturgis at Dallas on the day of the assassination. We have seen the picture; it is not Sturgis. We have also checked out the report; it is not true.

Joys of summer

cold melon, a canoe kissing small waves. It's a cat squinting behind yellow eyes on a porch rail; the smell of hot tar; sea birds serene in their own gliders.

It is counting children to see who stays for dinner, who goes home. It is new friends, cool caves, a zipper which used to close comfortably, the heart — stopping shrieking of little ones at play. It's a bestseller, an old song, church services with the humming of fans.

Summer is the fretful sleep of an infant, taffy, an amusement park, a county fair. It's a Hawaiian sports shirt, big cold dice clinking in a glass, the busy season for bees. A stone over metropolis, a stately steamer making its own breeze, the soft whispers and loud laughter of lovers.

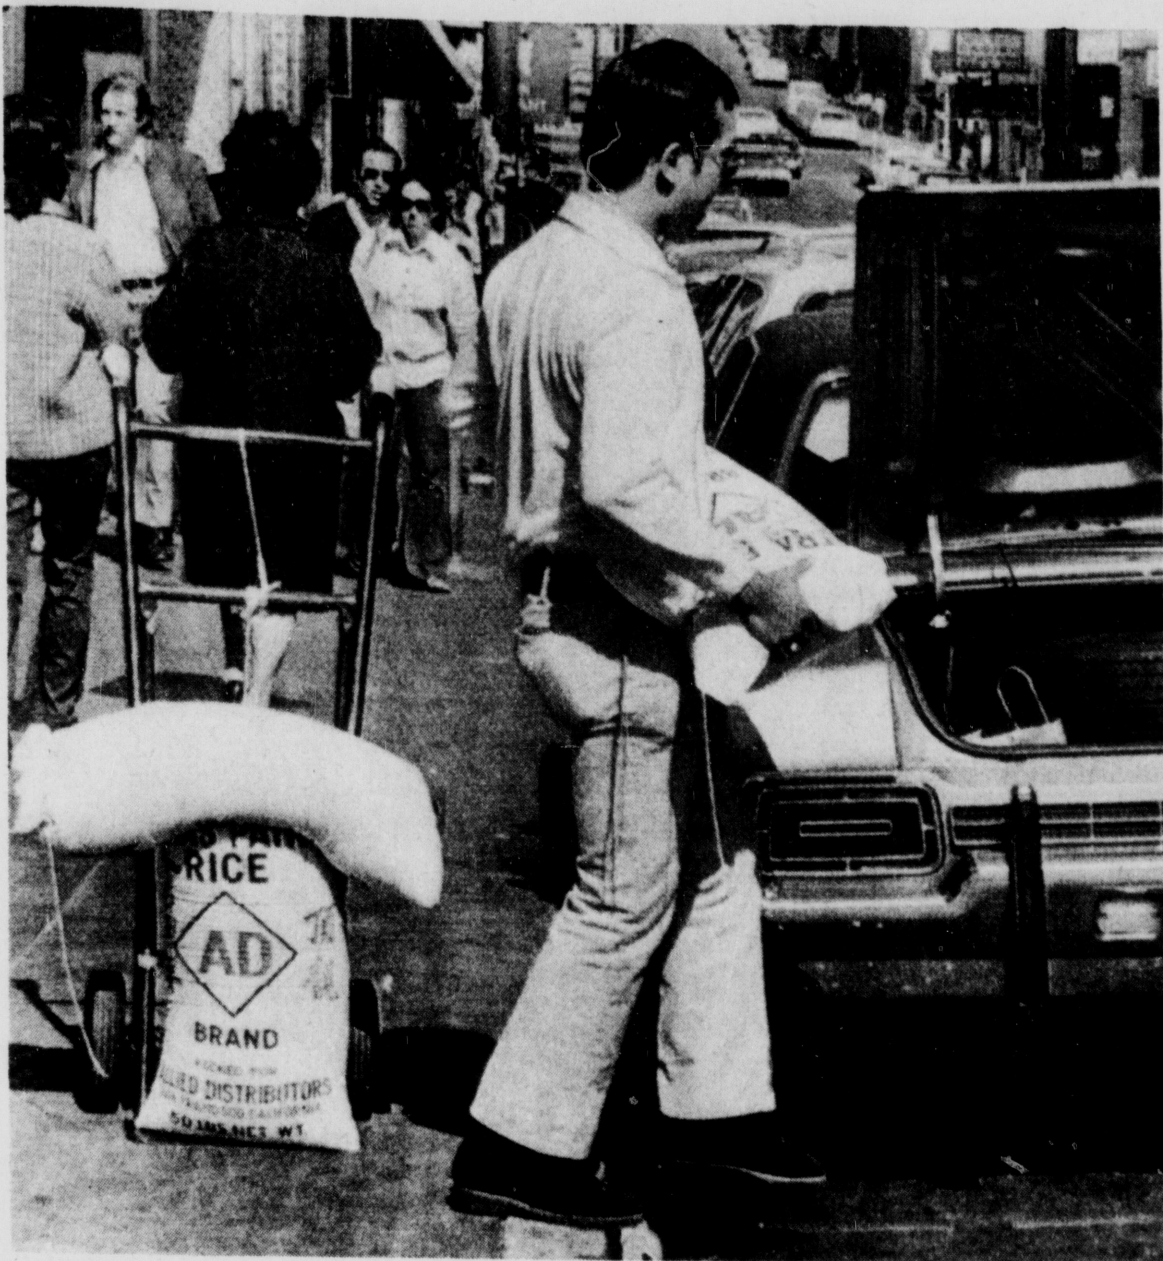

It is vacation time for neckties; the dry wheeze of an asthmatic kitchen pump; a night of confused dreaming. It is lacquered toenails, the smell of moved grass, tennis racquets and white shorts, a tiny cut on a tiny knee, horseback riding, cows under a big elm.

It's an extra handkerchief; a band concert in the park, summer jobs, teachers making out on cruise ships; paying for another child in a supermarket baby carriage; an old man turning the earth around the zinnias; a gray nest of wasps in the garage.

Summer is roller skates, hop scotch, hamburger on an outdoor grill, a proposal to "go steady"; the hesitant plink of a tuneless guitar. It's road maps in the glove compartment, school books gathering dust in a closet, a postponed letter to a friend.

It's a road mirage, museums, the fur house, girls nipping sunburned legs with razors. Bright sunlight and small shadows, wild mushrooms, the intense stillness before rain, a cold stream spangling over smooth stones. It's a time of hope; a moment of promise.

A good time to live.

Merchant in San Francisco's Chinatown loads customer's car with 50-pound bags of rice as a rice shortage panic struck Chinatown. The panic cleaned out most stores of their rice supply. (UPI Wirephoto)

Chinese hoard rice

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Rumors of a rice shortage in San Francisco's teeming Chinatown have led to panic buying and grocery store owners said Sunday they are cleaned out of the food staple.

Chinese families have been buying rice by the 50-pound bagful and one couple was reported to have stockpiled 60 sacks — 3,000 pounds — although there is no apparent basis for the belief that there is a shortage of the grain.

"There's no reason for the shortage," said Allen Jue of the Henry Chong Co., one of Chinatown's six rice wholesalers. "It's just that some people think there is and grab all the rice they can."

Wholesalers reported they all were out of the rice, the long grain patna variety that is grown in Texas and has the texture and taste of rice grown in China's Kwangtung province.

The run on rice, which most Chinese eat for three meals a day, has pushed the price up from $10 a sack to $14.50.

Dealers said that most hoarders seem to be immigrants from Hong Kong, who have memories of famine in their homeland.

"To them, it's something terrifying," Jue said. "You can't eat money, so they pay whatever price is asked."

Wide-eyed tourists in Chinatown snapped pictures of frail-looking elderly Chinese women, many in traditional peasant garb of black baggy pants and smock tops, toting 50-pound sacks of rice on their shoulders.

Some buyers used hand carts to carry home their rice or take it to pickup trucks.

Despite the shortage in grocery stores, most Chinese restaurants in the popular tourist area reported enough rice to last two weeks.

"After that, who knows?" asked a spokesman for Joe Jung's restaurant. "It's going to cost us more, that's for sure."

Jue said that the shortage in San Francisco had forced some families to drive across the Bay to Oakland or to the state capital of Sacramento 80 miles to the northeast to buy supplies.

DER sets goals to guide future growth, life in state

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Department of Environmental Resources has nearly completed the first part of a master plan for Pennsylvania's future environmental, social and economic development.

A set of goals has been drafted which if adopted, will affect the daily lives of virtually every citizen of the commonwealth both today and for generations to come.

The goals will be the basis for policies that affect and water, land uses, fish and wildlife, education, population growth and distribution, waste disposal, transportation, energy, housing, recreation, health, noise, food and clothing.

These policies will determine where houses, apartments, roads, shopping centers, factories can be built and at the same time will spell out the environmentally fragile land that should be protected.

Copies of the goals were mailed last week to about 800 city and county planners, members of citizen's groups and professional organizations.

Once their comments have been received, the goals will be changed if necessary and eventually incorporated as the official objectives in Pennsylvania's Environmental Master Plan.

The Master Plan is designed to put an end to the days of short-sighted and irresponsible growth, development and abuse of the state's natural resources.

Rick Carlson, assistant program manager for the Bureau of Environmental Master Planning said once the plan is developed, state government officials will be considering the environment in all policy decisions.

He said the construction of a highway is a good example of how the decision-making process will involve environmental considerations.

"You have to consider not only what is the impact of the highway route, but also are you going to spawn different kinds of industries or development what is the area's environment best suited for," Carlson said.

"Running expressways through Lancaster County may be good for getting from Philadelphia to Harrisburg, but it is an area with tremendously valuable agricultural land and to chew it up with development of shopping centers and the like would be foolish."

The key to the environmental goals is the recent amendment to the state Constitution which reads: "The people have a right to clean air, pure water, and to the preservation of the natural, scenic, historic and esthetic values of the environment."

The goals propose both to restore air, land and water that already has been polluted and to protect unspoiled areas of the state from future degradation.

They also propose to: —provide for wise management of fish and wildlife resources and their habitats.

—provide environmental education and "develop an attitude and way of life reflecting a regard for nature and the needs and limits of the natural process."

—encourage the growth and distribution of population consistent with the limits of natural resources.

—insure wise management of solid and liquid wastes through recycling and/or other methods of disposal and reuse presently feasible or developed in the future.

—promote recreational resources and facilities considering the needs of all users.

Libya seizes control over Occidental Oil as protest

CAIRO (UPI) — The Libyan government nationalized 51 per cent of Occidental Oil Co. in what Libyan officials said Sunday was "another slap in the face of America" because of its support of Israel.

R.H. Espey, president of Occidental's operations in Libya—which account for 15 per cent of the country's total crude oil production—said the nationalization was "totally unexpected."

A Libyan official of Occidental, who asked not to be named, said Sunday the latest nationalization "is a warning to the other companies (operating in Libya). I also believe this is a reply to America's all-out support of Israel."

It was the second takeover of American-owned oil holdings in Libya by Col. Moammar Khadafy's government in recent months. Khadafy announced the takeover of the Bunker Hunt oil company June 11, saying the United States "deserves a hard slap in its insolent face" for its policy of support for Israel.

A Libyan government official said in a telephone call to Cairo "the new takeover is yet another slap in the face of America and I believe the slaps will continue."

The Radio Tripoli announcement of the Occidental takeover did not give a reason.

The Libyan government has warned the three international companies operating on its territory—Oasis, Amoseas and Occidental—on several occasions that it wanted to have 100 per cent control of their operations.

He said takeover proceedings began one hour after the official decision was announced late Saturday.

Radical workers want control

DETROIT (UPI) — Two young black workers shut down a Chrysler plant two weeks ago and brought renewed attention to militants trying to gain control of the auto plants.

The radical workers are pitted against Chrysler and their union, the United Auto Workers. Many are "dedicated to revolution," says UAW Vice President Douglas A. Fraser.

How much difference is there between a revolutionary and a worker simply fed up with his job, the union and the company? How do you tell them apart?

Isaac Shorter, 26, a native of Cleveland, Miss., and Larry Carter, 23, succeeded in getting a white foreman fired because they said he abused black workers. They became instant folk heroes. Chrysler lost one day of production and may have set a precedent by dealing with them directly instead of through the UAW.

Shorter later said he is a socialist whose goal is "the workers taking control of Chrysler."

"We share the profits, the community shares the profits, the country shares the profits, the world shares the profits," is how he explained his plans.

"We know the role the union plays—they sell us out," he said. "They go behind closed doors and they sell us out. They represent the interests of the corporation, not us."

"We plan on getting rid of the UAW, taking over the UAW. I believe that the workers in the plant should be independent from the UAW. I believe that the workers should control the plants."

While their numbers may be small, dissidents have shown they can erode the authority of the union to assure Chrysler it can have strike-free production. They can also embarrass the UAW leadership while national contract talks are under way.

Within two weeks of the Jefferson Avenue "hijacking," as Fraser referred to it, a second Chrysler facility—the Detroit Forge Plant—was shut down by 1,400 black and white workers. At first glance, it appeared that radicals had touched off another shutdown. Leaflets containing socialist and communist phrases were found near the plant gates.

Reacting within the first hours of the last walkout, Fraser said it had been led by outside agitators. He later said outside groups "dedicated to revolution" were trying to take advantage of the situation in the 48-year-old plant.

"It's the radical group that is in Detroit that is dedicated to revolution and wildcat strikes," said Fraser. "They oppose the company and the UAW with equal fervor."

But, said Fraser, "Our members won't be taken in by those groups. They're just trying to take advantage of these situations."

The "situations" include heavy overtime, sometimes poor working conditions and the continual battle between the men on the line and their immediate superiors—the foremen. In those conditions, workers, like anybody else, can sometimes be led by the vocal minority.

Workers on the picket line disputed any claim that the wildcat strike was inspired by the same dissident workers who shut down the Jefferson Avenue plant by seizing a power cage and shutting off electricity to a feeder line.

But as they walked off the job at midnight Tuesday, they were met by two or three men passing out leaflets signed by the "People's Tribune" and calling for the walkout to continue.

Through the first three days of their walkout, the striking workers at Detroit Forge were handed leaflets, flyers and small newspapers printed by the U.S. Progressive Labor Party, Socialist workers and other left-wing groups.

In most cases, the papers ended up littering the road in front of the plant gates on Detroit's East Side. The party workers were often asked, and sometimes threatened, to leave the area.

Even convenience foods can be diet-wise in the hands of a low-calorie cook!

Refrigerator rolls, for example. With dinner they're just extra bread, a sponge for butter calories! However, those handy rolls-in-a-can are a dandy stand-in for pastry, the perfect base for turning low-calorie fruit into a spectacular dessert that only seems fattening.

Here we use them to make open-faced fruit tart — less than 100 calories a serving. A conventional slice of peach or berry pie can be 400 or more!

Rolls-in-a-can!

Low-calorie pastry

- 4 ounce can refrigerator crescent rolls
- 2 cans (16 ounces each) low-calorie sliced peaches
- 4 tablespoons sugar optional: sugar substitute to equal 1/4 cup
- 1 envelope plain gelatin 1/2 cup cold water

Break open canned rolls and unroll dough flat. Place in a nonstick eight or nine-inch square cakepan and spread thin with the tips of your fingers, so that the entire bottom of the pan is covered with dough. Quick-bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 12 minutes or more, until brown. Remove and cool.

Drain peaches and reserve juice. On top of baked crust, arrange the peaches neatly in four rows, all slices facing the same direction.

Sprinkle the gelatin on top of the cold water in a saucepan. Heat over very low flame until gelatin melts. Combine gelatin mixture, sugar and reserved peach juice. Stir in additional sugar substitute if sweeter dessert is desired. Chill in refrigerator or freezer for 20 or 30 minutes, until liquid thickens slightly. Spoon this glaze over peaches, only enough to thoroughly cover. Chill several hours before serving.

Makes nine three-inch squares, 90 calories each.

Ann Landers

Beautiful guy

Dear Ann Landers: I coach a Little League baseball team here in Nashville. One 14-year-old boy, call him Johnny, was on my team for two years.

During the last season, Johnny's father was killed in a car accident and it fell to me to inform Johnny of the death. Since then I've become Johnny's "big brother."

I travel quite a bit and Johnny frequently accompanies me. He's been a guest in the homes of my friends and acquaintances. Because he is so likeable he has endeared himself to many of these professional people.

We recently learned that Johnny has a terminal bone disease and will probably not live to see another winter. We want to do everything we can to make him happy. Johnny wants to revisit some of the places we've been and see our mutual friends again.

How can I tell those we will visit of Johnny's condition without provoking an over-response? We want everything to be as normal as possible. Johnny knows and he doesn't want any sympathy. How should I handle it? Thank you.

From Tennessee

Dear F.T.: I see no reason to say anything. If the boy is well enough to travel he need not be treated as a sick child and no one has to know. And, I might add, you sound like a beautiful guy.

Dear Ann Landers: Four years ago I married a woman with a daughter from a previous marriage. The girl (now 17) has always caused trouble between my wife and me. I thought I could handle it. Now I'm not so sure.

A year ago my wife gave Melissa permission to use her charge accounts. Since that time, the bills have been out of sight. A few months ago I learned that Melissa let a few friends charge on her mother's account. So far the girls have not repaid Melissa and I doubt they ever will.

Last week I announced that I was writing to the stores stating that no one but my wife should be permitted to use her charge account. Melissa called me some choice names and her mother took her side. That same night my wife retaliated by moving into the guest room. I don't want to live on the other side of a wall for the rest of my life.

Should I hold my ground until next September when Melissa goes away to school? I hate to wait that long but if you say so, I will.

Odd Man Out

Dear Man: The girl is not the problem. She is merely the battlefield on which you and your wife are fighting your own little war.

A woman who would impose this type of exile on her husband has no respect for the physical aspects of marriage. When sex is used as payment for favors and withheld as punishment, the marriage is pegged at the prostitution level. Tell your wife you want her to go with you for counseling or you will put up a wall of your own. Like legal.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a middle-aged woman who has been reading your column for many years. I don't like to criticize because I think you do a world of good, but your language is becoming unbelievably crude.

Actually it's not the things you say in your column that I take exception to, it's the headlines you write. For example, the one I am looking at now: "STINKY HUSBAND CAN BE CURED."

I find such language offensive and I'm registering a complaint.

Update New York Reader Dear New York: I have nothing to say about the headlines. Every paper writes its own. You should complain to the newspaper. You don't need to now, however — they will read your complaint when they receive this copy.

Dear Ann Landers: What is real friendship? The longer I live, the less I'm sure. We lived in a Midwestern city for 20 years. Six couples in our circle were very close.

Eight years ago we moved East. We have invited every one of these couples to visit us. Not one has. We've written dozens of letters and made countless long-distance phone calls. A handful have acknowledged the letters. No one has ever phoned us.

We wouldn't know they were alive if it weren't for the Christmas cards and periodic rash of "invitations" to birthday celebrations, anniversary parties, the graduation announcements, weddings of their children, and now the christenings of their grandchildren. This week I received six.

Both my husband and I feel that our old friends have given no indication they really are about us. We've decided to ignore all the mailing pieces. Are we wrong? —

Even Up

Dear Up: Neither distance nor time diminishes true friendship. I suspect the quality of the relationships was not as genuine as you thought.

It is possible to feel warmly about people you haven't seen for many years, but friendships must be tended like gardens and people take care of the things they really care about.

Dear Ann Landers: Regarding the photographic buff who wants to enter a nude picture of his wife in a local art contest:

Many centuries ago Herodotus wrote of a Persian King who had a very beautiful wife. He was so proud of her body that he invited his best friend to hide behind the draperies in their bedroom. The friend was delighted.

The Queen became aware of the plan. On that extraordinary night she manufactured an excuse to send the King on an errand. When he left she told his friend, "When the King returns, either you will kill him and marry me and become King or I will scream and order the guards to kill you."

That's how Persia got a new King.

History Buff

Dear Buff: It's easier to inherit the job from your father. Thanks for writing.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage — What To Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Peace, pale-face

WHAT'S YOUR DRIVING HABIT?
By Dr. Thomas F. Snyder

Your headache, neckache, or backache may be due to faulty driving posture.

(1) Do you drive with the seat tilted backwards? This creates a strain on the lower back by placing the joints in an abnormal position.

(2) Do you sit hunched over the steering wheel or grasp it very tightly? This causes strain of the neck, which in turn irritates spinal nerves in the lower neck and shoulder area.

(3) Do you drive with your legs stretched out and your knees straight? You create abnormal stress in the legs and lower spine.

If any spinal condition persists from prolonged poor driving habit, consult your chiropractor for best advice.

DELIVERY TO THE POCONO MOUNTAIN AREA

Erma Bombeck

The critic

You know the sad part about getting older is you get too practical.

Take the movies. As a kid I used to go and watch Carmen Miranda dressed in 200 yards of ruffles and a wash basket of fruit on her head. On cue, she would break into song accompanied by a 38-piece orchestra led by Xavier Cugat and 150 chorus girls tap dancing on 50 white grand pianos.

I never questioned why she wasn't carrying a Trick or Treat bag. Why Xavier Cugat was hiding in a tree with 38 musicians or why there were 50 albino grand pianos floating in a swimming pool.

All that has changed. I am older now and quite realistic. While watching a Western with my husband the other night, I observed that Indian has a vaccination and Miss Kitty is wearing a Cross-Your-Heart bra.

What difference does it make?" he asked.

"I don't want them to think I am anybody's fool. You watch enough of these Westerns and you know why the pony express went out of business. The horses gave out carrying all that hair bleach to the Big Valley."

"Will you just sit back and enjoy the movie," he said, "I thought you liked love stories. The war is over and any minute the soldier is going to return to his ranch and be reunited with his wife."

"Gross!" I said as they locked in an embrace. "Can you imagine what a man's breath is like when he has fought a war, drunk a quart of rot-gut whiskey and traveled three months without brushing? His mouth must smell like the bottom of a well. And in the morning yet. By the way, how old is Gower Champion?"

"Why?"

"Because I didn't think he was old enough to choreograph the Indians dancing at Little Big Horn."

"Anything else?" grimaced my husband.

"Yes, how come the houses never have screen doors, the women are wearing lip gloss, and they always have the correct change for the bartender?"

"For the same reason Jeanette McDonald and Nelson Eddy sang in the snow without coats, Tarzan never got a thorn in his foot and Mickey Rooney was in college when he was 35."

"About Romeo and Juliet," I mused, "wonder why they weren't in band practice...."

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — Some changes may be proposed. Study everything from an objective viewpoint. Change for its own sake could cost you ground. Concentrate on purposeful aims.
April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — Early a.m. will hold some restrictions, bringing little result from your efforts. Be patient: the hours after noon will see an uptrend in all your endeavors.
May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) — New techniques, novel ventures, unusual methods could bring real advancement. Day especially favors experimentation, pioneering.
June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Realize the true meaning of events; keep personal feelings out of dealings, decisions; you can THINK yourself into difficulty if you're not careful.
July 24 to Aug. 23 (Leo) — Synchronize endeavors so that persons working with you will cooperate in surer fashion. Crystallize thoughts and ideas before swinging into action.
August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — Focus ambitions on an attainable plateau. Don't strive for the unreasonable. If not well counseled, new ventures could pose a problem.
September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — A good day for trying to push through a unique program. You will get backing from those in authority — IF you make the first move.
October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — An occupational situation may tax your ingenuity but cast aside any doubts of your ability to handle. By midday, you'll have the answers you need.
November 23 to December 31 (Sagittarius) — You usually have good control of your emotions but feelings are likely to run high now, so be forewarned. Maintain the judicial calm for which the Sagittarian is noted.
December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn) — Some confusion in day's early hours can be cleared up if you just roll with the punches. Trying to crash your way through it will only worsen matters.
January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — Scrutinize all documents carefully now. In contracts or estimates, especially, you should regard any kind of escape clause as suspect.
February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) — You may receive a job offer which entails greater responsibility but, along with them, your opportunities will multiply. Think carefully.

YOU BORN TODAY are a canny, knowledgeable person, filled with a great sense of justice and an altruism which could lead you to great heights in the cause of world-betterment. As with most Leos, you love the theater and could excel at any undertaking connected with it. You love color and uniforms, too, and may be attracted to the military service. Other outlets for your talents: music, literature, journalism, education, the law. You are more practical than many of your Sign, so may be more conservative in spending. Opening lead — king of hearts.

This deal occurred in the playoff between my team and the Curt Smith team to determine which of us would represent the United States in the 1973 world championship. My team won the match handily but not before we were badly clawed on this hand.

Maybe I shouldn't have doubled five spades with the West hand, though at the time it seemed the right thing to do. I led the king of hearts, which was ruffed, and later scored the ace of clubs and ace of diamonds, but that was the end of the party. Declarer made five spades doubled for 850 points and I was left holding the bag a sadder, if not wiser, man.

This was a bitter pill to swallow, but matters got much worse when I heard what had happened at the other table. My teammates this time held the North-South cards and the bidding went in this odd fashion:

South West North East
Pass 1♥ 2♣ 2♠ (1)
Pass 3♦ 4♣ 4♥
Pass 5♣ Pass 5♥
Pass Dble Pass 5♥
Pass Dble

Curt Smith, East, was the scoundrel who inserted the two-spade bid that stumped my beleaguered teammates. It is difficult to blame South for doubling five hearts, but declarer, West, wrapped up that contract without any trouble. His only losers were a spade and a trump.

So the upshot of the affair was that the Curt Smith team made five spades doubled at one table with the North-South cards, and also made five hearts doubled at the other table with the East-West cards. The hand cost my team 1,700 points.

Earl Bartell . . . costume's a put-on, but his hobbies aren't.

'Novel-a-week' stenotypist also skydiver, much else

HARRISBURG (UPI) — For Earl L. Bartell of Camp Hill, who combines writing the equivalent of a novel a week with skydiving, "life is beautiful if you live it."

Bartell, at 30 is a stenotypist, or reporter, currently involved in the $56.6 million Bell of Pennsylvania rate case before the state Public Utility Commission — a hearing with wordage equaling nine 300-page novels so far.

But in addition to proficiency in taking 225 words of oral testimony per minute, Bartell is also a student pilot, golfer and skier, plays tennis, racquet ball, squash and is addicted to "the ultimate high—free-fall sky diving."

Married and the father of a six-year-old daughter, Bartell has tried his hand at farming, worked as a licensed hairdresser in California, and drove a city bus in Sacramento, Calif.

"It was bus driving that really turned me around," he said. "City driving is a hazard, a hassle, especially if you're responsible for the safety of a lot of people; and after I'd skidded that bus through rain-slicked intersections on bald tires a few times, I used to wake up nights flailing for the brake pedal."

"And I decided there has to be more to life."

Bartell joined another bus driver in enrolling for a business school course for stenotyping, stuck with it a "solid 22 months out of two years," and was one in 3 out of 27 to graduate into the exacting, high-concentration profession that earns reporters $25,000 a year and up.

Despite the favorable income, Bartell, who is associated with Mohrbach & Marshal, Inc., Harrisburg, said there is a scarcity of stenotypists.

"Obviously a reporter needs good touch proficiency on the stenotype, but the key is ability for sustained, high concentration," he said. "Professional witnesses — people use to testifying — make a reporter's life easier, and the only real problems are mumbler, people with strong accents, and the occasions when two people are talking at the same time."

Bartell said he rarely forms judgments as he records the oral testimony and rulings of a parade of attorneys, witnesses, judges and hearing examiners. His reporter role has, however, triggered a new future course — he yearns to go to law school and join what he now regards as "the real action—law practice."

But for the present, Bartell finds the reporter role both pleasant and rewarding enough to afford his family's No. 1 sports preference—skiing, and his own love—skydiving or jumping.

"I love skiing, but I really go for jumping," he said. "I jump anywhere from the 2,500 foot 'hop and pop' altitude to the 10,500-foot free-fall level."

the Senate Watergate hearings, welded wire legs and antenna to them and sold them for $10.

Fred O. Meyer, owner of Oregon's largest department store, had Watergate T-shirts featuring caricatures of Nixon saying "Don't Bug Me" taken off the shelves and a check of hobby and novelty stores in the Buffalo, N.Y. area showed they were not carrying such items.

"I wouldn't touch Watergate with a 10-foot pole," said Frank Tatar, president of Comon-Tat, Inc., a western New York toy and card manufacturer. "That's a scandal. It's disgraceful and most people are fed up hearing about it. A guy would have to be pretty silly to try and make money on Watergate. He's got to have a warped sense of humor."

Louis Benno, a representative of the New Humor Co. of Dallas, said the Watergate items were selling "beautifully."

In Washington, the place where it all started, the affair has spawned a whole range of promotional gimmicks apparently unique to the city. The Watergate apartments have become a sightseeing stop for most of the tour buses and the complex itself is using the caricature of a small spotted bug on all its stationery.

Gov. Shapp targeting in on PUC

By JOHN S. LANGDON
HARRISBURG (UPI) — One of Gov. Milton J. Shapp's surest campaign targets in the probable event he seeks re-election will be the Public Utility Commission.

Pennsylvania's utility rate setting agency is all but inundated by at least $360 million in proposed utility rate hikes to consumers. Big power companies' requests lead with $265 million.

That the governor would pass up the historic opportunity to become Pennsylvania's first chief executive to seek a second term is regarded as unlikely as a bear passing up honey.

And that the governor will forego his old campaign target — the utilities — and the Republican-dominated PUC he regards as utility-oriented is considered equally unlikely.

There are also signs the venerable chairman of the PUC, former GOP State Chairman George I. Bloom, to be 75 Sept. 2, anticipates the fray.

A lawyer for the past 51 years, a Republican State Committeeman for 34, his party's state chairman from 1956-63, and PUC chief since 1965, Bloom's 10-year term runs to 1975.

And with or without the current vacancy on his commission, Bloom has a solid majority until at least late 1974.

Republican Commissioner James McGirr Kelly's term runs to October 1974 and that of Republican Commissioner Robert K. Bloom to April 1979.

Gov. Shapp's lone Democratic appointee on the commission, Louis J. Carter, has pursued his gubernatorial mandate to represent the consumer interest on the commission. But he is quick to claim that his is a voice in the wilderness when utility rates are determined in PUC executive session.

"The Republican majority is unconcerned with the economic problems of the average person. All suggestions in behalf of the consumer are met with the charge I'm playing politics," Carter says.

"They won't listen, they ignore issues, and the only way to change the situation is to replace them."

Gov. Shapp's personal choice for PUC Chief Counsel, Philip P. Kalodner, leaves that post this fall after nearly two years of attempts to counter utility rate proposals with consumer representation.

"The need for new critical approaches is great," he says.

Asked if he would lend the governor campaign support in a reelection try, Kalodner said he would if asked.

And Commissioner Carter's

dissents, particularly those claiming that PUC-approved rates give utility shareholders returns of 15 to 20 per cent, are regarded likely ammunition.

PUC chairman's nemesis quitting as chief counsel

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Philip P. Kalodner, a burr under the saddle of Public Utility Commission Chairman George I. Bloom for nearly two years, will leave his post as chief counsel of the Pennsylvania PUC this fall.

Appointed by former state Attorney General J. Shane Creamer as the personal choice of Gov. Milton J. Shapp to try riding herd on the Republican-controlled utility rate-setting agency, Kalodner was sworn in Jan. 21, 1972.

PUC Chairman Bloom, who will be 75 Sept. 2, greeted the appointment men with the comment the commission needed "someone who will work five days a week, and if he isn't going to give full time to the job, then I doubt the commission will pay him on a full time basis."

With the PUC inundated with a record number of major utility rate cases in both 1972 and now, Kalodner, 42, son of the retired U. S. Court of Appeals Judge Harry E. Kalodner, has been working a seven-day, 70-hour week for his $25,000 salary.

Kalodner's personal pace was set in the years between his graduation from Harvard Law School and his appointment as PUC Chief Counsel.

His political debut came in 1959 with election as the first Democrat to the Cheltenham Township Commissioners. Montgomery County, in 30 years. He joined former Philadelphia Mayor Richardson Dilworth's law firm.

In 1960 he was named a deputy state attorney general under then Gov. David L. Lawrence to investigate Philadelphia vote frauds, and subsequently served former Philadelphia Mayor James H.G. Tate's Model Cities program, worked with Shenandoah, Pa., born entrepreneur Jerry Wolman on the $12 million Spectrum sports palace in Philadelphia, and — briefly in 1970 — was president of Curtis Publishing Co.

At the PUC, 3-1 GOP, Kalodner saw his role of chief counsel as "prosecutory — trying to find the holes in the utilities' cases. I believe in the adversary system."

His view and staff work led him to recommend to the PUC in the $48 million Philadelphia Electric Co. rate filing that the company "is not entitled to any rate relief ... and that a substantial reduction should be ordered by the commission of between $10-15 million."

He likewise recommended that the PUC deny the entire $36 million rate increase requested by the Pennsylvania Electric Co., and suggested during the lengthy Bell of Pennsylvania $56.6 million rate case still in hearing that he "would not be surprised" to conclude the rate hike was unjustified.

Kalodner's prosecutory role and his practice of filing post-hearing briefs to utilities and complainants as well as to PUC, quickly drew Chairman Bloom's ire and prompted a continuing series of questions on the role of chief counsel.

When Kalodner presented a consumer argument in a case involving Metropolitan Edison, Reading, the power company filed suit against Kalodner in Commonwealth Court, and Bloom testified against him.

Without commenting directly on Gov. Shapp's proposal for including PUC in creation of a new Department of Consumer Affairs, Kalodner indicated broad changes are needed for the commission to fulfill its role.

Stonehedge development swamped by sewer slime

Panic plumbing

Richard Eskra, a resident of Stonehedge Development, battles inadequate water drainage by digging trenches around his house to prevent direct water seepage. The surface water will inevitably flow into Eskra's sewerage system.

By BRUCE POSTEN
Pocono Record Reporter
STROUDSBURG — No drainage fields, poor septic tanks, cracked foundations and roads scarred with potholes are the problems that bedevil an angry group of residents at Stonehedge Development in Stroud Township.

The sewerage system in the Stonehedge Development is not only inadequate, but also is threatening the health of the community, according to one worried mother.

Since early last June, three families at Stonehedge have had the Stauffer and Phillips Co., liquid waste haulers, pump out their sewerage system weekly because of inadequate drainage fields.

But now the residents are out of luck because of the haulers' strike and the inability of the waste haulers to dump in the Stroudsburg septic system.

The results of the haulers' strike have caused quite a stink, but perhaps nowhere so evident as in the sewerage infested lawns of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Eskra, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Singer and Mr. and Mrs. Walt Radvon.

Pools of green and black slime have settled on the property of all three families causing a sharp stench.

"The only way we have been able to alleviate the smell is by pouring clorox in the ditches everyday," Paul Singer said.

Singer said other families in the development have not only been faced with sewerage draining onto their lawns, but toilets backing up and water seeping through their floors.

Richard Eskra, a former New Jersey resident who moved to Stonehedge in June, explained the problem stems from poor septic tanks and inadequate draining systems.

He said that the Cosmopolitan Investors Life Insurance Co. are the owners of the land and contracted the Overland Development Co. to build the houses.

Eskra said Cosmopolitan is currently suing Overland for not fulfilling their contract to complete the building of houses.

Charles Smull, supervisor of Stonehedge for Cosmopolitan has been given credit by many of the residents for finding temporary solutions for some of the development's problems.

Smull has attempted to keep the roads open during the winter and supply pumps to families in need of assistance for poor drainage.

"Cosmopolitan will get the drainage problem fixed when we get a meeting with the township engineers," Smull said. However, he said he didn't know when the meeting would be.

Paul Singer's wife, Diane, hopes the meeting is soon after taking her two-year-old daughter to the dispensary with a staff infection.

"A doctor at the hospital said it is quite possible the staff came from the sewerage. He said it could have come from the air, too. But the sewerage is the most likely source," Mrs. Singer said.

Mrs. Eskra and other mothers at the development said they are afraid to let their children play in the yards for fear of contracting some disease.

Mrs. Eskra also noted she has been boiling all the family's drinking water as a precautionary measure. In addition, the three families affected most by poor drainage have been unable to use their washers and dryers.

"I even take fewer baths because a lot of our water is backing up in our toilet and sewerage is also coming in to our bath tubs," Mr. Singer said.

Nelson Westbrook, chairman of the Stroud Township supervisors, said that "Stonehedge has been considered quite a problem."

Because of an excess of surface water and poor drainage, Westbrook said the township will not allow any more building or repair work to be conducted in the development.

Westbrook said the whole area must be drained and a system must be installed such as the aerobic system, which is rather sophisticated and expensive.

He said a meeting with officials from the development was scheduled last week, but no one showed up.

This week another meeting is planned between officials and township representatives. However, Westbrook could give no specific date.

In the meantime, Stonehedge residents, mired in drainage problems wait patiently.

Stroud fuming over flooding

By GERARD SUTHERLIN
Pocono Record Reporter
ANALOMINK — A group of angry Stroud Township residents have been seeking action to alleviate a flooding problem affecting a number of homes in the village of Analomink. They say they are getting a run-around.

But local officials appraisal of the situation feel that the solution to the residents' problem may be just where the flood water usually winds up — in their own back yards, and in their wallets.

"If they were not aware of the problem when they purchased properties, I really feel sorry for them. I can understand their anguish. But that's private property and there's legally nothing I can think of that we might do for them," said William Heller, local superintendent of highways for the Pennsylvania

Department of Transportation (PennDOT).

James Batchler, owner of the Stroud Manor Hotel in Analomink, said he lost two days business when his basement flooded. "I've been installing a four-foot corrugated pipe on my own at an additional expense of $3,500," he said as he stood watching a back-hoe and several workers lay the piping in a freshly-dug ditch.

Ronald Strunk, a neighbor who has also experienced flooding said some 15 families on both sides of Rte. 191 in Analomink have been affected by flooding in their yards and cellars.

"We've gone to PennDOT, the Department of Environmental Resources (DER), and Stroud Township supervisors," said Strunk. "They send us to someone else and he sends us back to where we've already been."

"It's a real run-around, and the only thing they (the officials) seem to agree on is it's not their problem but someone else's," Strunk added.

The problem stems from heavy water runoff from slopes above Rte. 191 in Analomink. The only drainage beneath the state road is a four-by-five foot box culvert which a man could walk through. The end of this had been partially blocked and some PennDOT officials feel this may have been at least responsible in part for water backup into nearby basements.

"When he (Batchler) dug that ditch and laid piping from the end of that culvert on out towards the Brodhead Creek, he cleaned out the blockage and may have alleviated the problem himself," said Heller.

Batchler and Strunk said they had called PennDOT and were told by a worker there to go to the township. Heller said neither he nor any of his assistant managers had ever received word of the problem, but after being contacted by The Record, he personally went to Analomink to meet Batchler and view storm damages.

"These type of problems are always a headache, and we have them all over the county," said Heller.

Batchler also said he approached the Stroud Township supervisors and had been told by them they would lay pipe if he would dig the ditch on his property where the state culvert ended. After checking with their solicitor, however, they called him back and told him they could not use taxpayer's money on private property.

Strunk says he and some other residents feel that the real reason was the supervisors found out how large the problem actually was.

Squatter appeal denied by court

WILKES-BARRE — An appeal by the Tocks Island squatters to appeal a July 3 court order on the federal eviction suit against them has met with defeat.

District Judge Michael Sheridan has ruled that his July 3 ruling on a government attorney's request for partial summary judgment and order of possession was an enabling "interlocutory" order with a final judgment yet to come.

Sheridan ruled that the government had proved it was the legal owner of the controversial dam project area along the Delaware River occupied by the squatters but did not issue an order of possession to federal officials.

The squatters later filed a motion appealing the July 3 ruling, asking that further action in the suit be halted until the appeal could be heard. Sheridan ruled this appeal was out of order.

Sheridan is expected to issue a final judgment on the case shortly. That ruling will probably be a possession order and may be appealed by the squatters at that time.

Deering dash for finish tops kart dart at Pocono

LONG POND — More than 550 karts from throughout the nation and Canada came to race at Pocono International Raceway this weekend for the Goeck Brothers Go-Kart Race for Life, but it was a deer that almost captured the checkered flag during the last of 17 races.

A sparse crowd of only 500 spectators waited in anticipation Sunday afternoon for some record-breaking laps to be run during the special high performance formula class.

The fans shrieked in disbelief, however, as they heard the announcer call attention to a deer running against the go-kart traffic on the back straightaway of the 2.8-mile course at Pocono.

The formula karts were expected to be running about 100 miles per hour when they hit the end of the 3,000-foot straightaway, but heavy rain had slowed the karts down considerably by the time the deer was spotted.

The race was yellow-flagged for approximately five laps until the deer tried to make the last turn in the road course, himself. "lost it in the turn," according to the humorous narration of announcer Dick Witaker, and fell down.

The animal retreated to the grassy infield, much to the relief of the competitors, until the last class was over.

Drivers aged 12 to retirees competed in 17 different classes of 45-minute endurance races during the weekend at Pocono.

After a lengthy battle for the number one position in the junior reed sprint class Sunday afternoon, Mario Andretti's 12-year-old son Michael took the checkered flag in his Viceroy racing kart.

On receiving his first-place trophy, which was almost as tall as the young driver, Michael commented that he drafted a little in the corners and stuck his finger in his carburetor at the last minute to win the event.

Racing both days was plagued by scattered showers, but the event was relatively accident free.

On Sunday a kart toppled over and there was a collision between two karts, but the drivers only sustained minor bruises.

Karters and their pit crews, competing merely for trophies, came in for the races from Michigan, Canada, California, Indiana, Virginia, Maine, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey.

Wayne coroner rules

Panther death no accident

By GARY BARANIK
Pocono Record Reporter
HONESDALE — The death of a former Black Panther found last month in a Northern Wayne County lake is labeled as either homicide or suicide.

Wayne County Coroner Robert Jennings ruled out accidental drowning as the cause of the death of Lonnie Epps, 22, Long Island City, N.Y., whose body was found in a private lake near Galilee.

Jennings said the Epps' death won't be ruled accidental in nature because the victim was reported to be a good swimmer and the private lake was extremely shallow.

The coroner also noted the victim was found fully clothed, including his shoes.

Officials from the New York City's Medical Examiner's Office performed an autopsy on the victim listing death due to drowning. But they said death came under "undetermined circumstances."

After visiting the pond site, Jennings said there is no point around the small lake where Epps could have fallen into the water.

Though Jennings believes death occurred as a result of either homicide or suicide, he can't substantiate either theory at this time.

Epps was a member of the "Black Panther 13" which were acquitted of sabotage acts in New York City in 1971.

They were arrested by New York City police for conspiring to kill New York City police and plotting to blow up police stations, department stores and railroad tracks.

The trial lasted eight months, the longest in the history of New York City.

New York City police said Epps was arrested April 27, 1972 for the March slaying and robbery of a Japanese salesman in front of a New York hotel.

Epps and several other persons allegedly robbed and stabbed to death Atsushi Kurahara, 35, according to police. Epps was out on bail pending trial.

Jennings said Epps' body was found July 25 by Mr. and Mrs. George Snyder, who own the private lake. The coroner said Epps had been dead for three days.

Epps had been working as a waiter for Camporific in Lookout, a summer camp for underprivileged children from New York City. The camp is located about a mile from the lake.

Special prosecutor named for Reilly murder trial

HONESDALE — A former division chief in the District Attorney's office of Philadelphia has been appointed to handle the prosecution in the John Reilly murder trial.

Atty. William Stevens of Philadelphia, who spent eight years in the DA's office and who is a candidate for a judgeship in the Common Pleas Court was named by Wayne County District Attorney Robert Conway.

Reilly, 57, is charged with murder and manslaughter in the 1970 death of Frank Dickerson, 23, a resident at a home for the mentally retarded operated by the defendant.

Conway said Sunday as DA of Wayne he is allowed to appoint prosecutors in a homicide case.

He said he chose Stevens because "he is very experienced in homicide cases and is extremely talented." Stevens brings with him the experience of more than 100 murder trials.

Stevens said he will be assisted in his case by Atty. Richard Sprague of the DA's Office.

Sprague has won fame as an attorney in Philadelphia and also for his handling of the murder trial of the persons charged in the death of "Jock" Yablonski and his family in Clarksville in 1971.

Stevens resigned from the DA's office last month to run for the judgeship because the Pennsylvania Supreme Court ruled he would be in violation of the City Charter if he continued in the DA's office while a candidate.

Conway said Sunday he wasn't sure if famed criminal lawyer, F. Lee Bailey would defend Reilly.

Reilly is being represented by the Boston law firm of Bailey, Alch and Gillis as well as Attys. Robert Munley and John Pieski of Scranton.

Alch was the attorney for convicted Watergate burglar James McCord and testified before the Special Watergate Committee in May.

Reilly is scheduled to go on trial Oct. 23 — the beginning of the fall session of the Court of Common Pleas in Wayne County.

However, officials close to the case believe the defense

PUC approves hourly increases

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The hourly rate for moving firm vehicles and drivers in Monroe, Northampton and Lehigh Counties has increased from $15.10 to $16.10, following approval by the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission.

The PUC, approving rate hikes for 33 moving firms in six Pennsylvania counties, also approved an hourly hike from $7.10 to $7.45 for each additional worker in the local tri-county area.

The truckers said the hike was necessary to meet higher operating costs for wages, gasoline and diesel fuel.

Write to know

Q. I'd like to know the reason for a highway direction sign. Just before Rte. 380 going west on I-80, there's a sign that says to Wilkes-Barre via 80 "55 miles," and to Wilkes-Barre via 380 it says "46 miles." This seems to be a serious misdirection, since 380 is absolutely the wrong way to go.

H.R., Stroudsburg

A. Not if you believe the Department of Transportation. Sign's essentially correct. Try this. Take 380 to Daleville, where it turns into 307. Take 307 to Scranton. It becomes Moosic Street. At the first traffic light, bear left, travel one block and turn left onto Willow Street. A half-block later, take the on ramp onto Rte. 81, which goes to Wilkes-Barre. DOT has agreed to re-check the mileage.

Q. On June 11, I ordered a pants suit from Greenland Fashions in Miami. Several weeks later, I received a notice saying the item was "temporarily out of stock," but would be sent as soon as it is replenished. To date, I have no reply to a second request. Could you check into this?

D.C. East Stroudsburg

A. Your item is still out of stock. The Customer Service office at Greenland Fashions said the firm is awaiting a supply from its New York outlet. The woman at Greenland made a special note to send your order first, before any other, when the supply arrives.

Q. I have been trying for some time to obtain a back copy of "Life" magazine, but when I contacted the company, they said they had no back issues of the copy I requested. The date is May 17, 1963, and it very important to me.

A. Your Write to Know man contacted the offices of "Time," which controlled the now-defunct "Life" until it ended publication recently. The result was the same: no copies. As has happened before, your only hope is that a reader can help you obtain this issue. So, readers, see what you can do.

Coroners investigate Wayne car fire death

ROCK LAKE — Dr. Marvin E. Aronson, chief medical examiner of Philadelphia, and Wayne County Coroner Robert Jennings will perform an autopsy today on the body of a Wayne County man found in a burning car Friday.

The victim was tentatively identified as Senen Garcia, 50, Elk Lake, Waymart R.D. 1.

State police at Honesdale said the car was found 150 feet off Rte. 247 near Rock Lake in a rural area.

Jennings said the 1966 Mustang was found burning at 7:30 a.m. Friday by a neighbor. Both doors were locked with the fire originating in the interior of the car.

The coroner said the fire was "not a normal car fire because of the amount of destruction of the car and the charring of the body."

A woman living near where the car was found told Jennings she heard "shots or muffled noises" early Friday but did not report it to police believing it was a hunter.

The car fire was extinguished by the Northern Wayne Fire Department of Lakewood.

Police said Garcia, who worked for the Bendix Corp. of Teterboro, N.J. maintained a New Jersey address in Lynnhurst.

He was living in New Jersey and coming home on weekends. Garcia was on vacation at the time of his death.

Jennings said Garcia's wife told police she last saw him at 11:15 p.m. Thursday. He didn't tell her where he was going.

Police believe the car may have been traveling north on Rte. 247 and left the road for some unknown reason.

'King Jack' captures third PGA tourney

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus ended doubts that he had achieved his desire when he won the PGA Championship Sunday for the third time to become golf's all-time top winner of major events.

The 33-year-old Nicklaus, a millionaire several times over although his pro career spans but a dozen years, surpassed the legendary Bobby Jones with his 14th career major championship.

He also moved within hailing distance of $2 million in official earnings on the U.S. tour with this, his fifth victory of 1973 and 49th of his career, and re-established himself firmly as the game's premier player.

Nicklaus, leading by a stroke at the start of the day, shot an easy two-under-par 69 and finished the 72 holes at 277.

That was four strokes better than Bruce Crampton, who earned the runner-up spot with an 18-hole birdie and now has finished second to Nicklaus in the last three major championships Nicklaus has won.

The Golden Bear, whose last major triumph was the '72 U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, had been beaten five times in search of that elusive No. 14 and some critics suggested that was because he had become satisfied with success.

He used to practice for a week or more at a time at the site of a major championship but here, Jack just showed up two days before, insisted "I'm better prepared for this tournament than I was for the others," and went out and proved it.

His previous rounds were 72, 68 and 68, and he never was in any danger of suffering the type of morale-shattering let-down that killed his bids in the Masters, U.S. Open and British Open this year. He had rounds of 77, 74 and 76 in those tournaments.

For Nicklaus, whose previous PGA victories were in 1963 at Dallas and in 1971 at Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., the triumph was worth $45,000, raising his 1973 earnings to $245,424, and moved his career total to $1,949,129.

His brilliant record includes three U.S. Open titles, four Masters, two British Opens and two U.S. Amateurs.

Jones won 13 major titles as an amateur including the U.S. Open four times and the British Open three times. Walter Hagen is third on the all-time list with 11, Ben Hogan has nine and Arnold Palmer—who failed even to survive the 36-hole cut here—has eight.

Nicklaus has finished in the top six in 12 of the 15 tournaments in which he has played this year.

Now, about the only world left for him to conquer, outside the $2 million career earnings mark, which he'll surely be the first to pass, is a triple 'Grand Slam.'

One more British Open championship would give Jack a triple sweep of the four major professional titles, and if you don't realize what that means, just consider that only three other players have even won them all once, and no one else has won them twice.

The victory also put Nicklaus in the World Series of Golf for the ninth time—he has won four times and finished second four times—with U.S. Open champ Johnny Miller, Masters winner Tommy Aaron and British Open titlist Tom Weiskopf. The 36-hole competition is scheduled for Sept. 8-9 at Firestone Country Club in nearby Akron, Ohio, and the winner will receive $50,000.

The four-stroke victory margin for Nicklaus equaled the record since the PGA changed from match play to stroke play in 1958. Al Geiberger won by four strokes in 1966.

There was a three-way tie for third place at 282 among Mason Rudolph, the cigar-chomping veteran who had second place to himself until he took a double-bogey six at the final hole—which cost him $13,125—and Lanny Wadkins and J.C. Snead.

Weiskopf, the British and Canadian Open champion, fell out of the running when he took a double bogey and two bogeys on the first five holes, shot his third straight 71 and finished tied at 283 with Dan Sikes and Don Iverson.

It was the first time in 10 tournaments, five of which he won, that Weiskopf didn't make the top five.

"I don't think I've ever missed so many short putts," he said. "I played as well as anybody could, but it just wasn't to be." Weiskopf missed 10 putts within five feet and 16 within eight in 72 holes.

While the finish was a defeat for Weiskopf, it had to be considered something of a triumph for Iverson, the obscure Wisconsin pro who shared the 18 and 36-hole leads and was only one stroke behind Nicklaus starting the final round.

Iverson, playing in a major championship for the first time, stayed close to Nicklaus until the final three holes but finished bogey-double bogey-par.

"I guess I got a little tight," said Iverson. "I was doing some scrambling all day."

His high finish earned Iverson some consolation in the form of an invitation to the 1974 Masters.

Nicklaus had three birdies in his round, including two in succession at the sixth and seventh holes, which is where he really took command.

At the 500-yard sixth he was over the green in two shots and almost holed his chip shot. He tapped in from six inches for a birdie. Then he made a four-foot birdie putt at the 201-yard seventh and sank a long putt for the final birdie at the 358-yard 15th.

His only bogey came at the 18th when Nicklaus, smiling and obviously relishing his victory, three putted from the fringe. He rammed his first putt five feet beyond the hole and then missed coming back.

Crampton's second place finish was worth $25,700, and pushed his 1973 figure, already No. 1 on the earnings list, to $270,841. Nicklaus slipped into second.

Miller and Lee Trevino, who became the sixth player in the tournament to shoot a course record-tying 67, finished at 286.

Aaron had 75-291 and Gary Player, the 1972 winner, had 78-294.

A's nip Yankees; near division lead

NEW YORK (UPI) — Overcoming an 11-5 deficit with six runs in the seventh and two in the eighth, the Oakland A's scored a 13-12 victory over the New York Yankees Sunday and moved to within one game of the division leading Kansas City Royals.

The Yankees had knocked Ken Holtzman and Paul Sindblad around for 11 runs and 15 hits in six innings but the A's rallied off Sam McDowell and Sparky Lyle in the seventh when the Yankee defense collapsed.

Dick Green opened the seventh with a walk and after Bert Campaneris fouled out, Bill North singled to right. Sal Bando popped out and it looked like McDowell would get out of the inning. But Reggie Jackson, who had smacked his 27th homer in the first inning, lined an RBI single to left to knock McDowell out of the game.

Lyle, ineffective his last five times out, came in and walked Deron Johnson and then yielded a two-run double to Gene Tenace, a two-run single to Jesus Alou and a base hit to Ray Fosse before being removed. Pinchhitter Vic Davalillo greeted rookie Tom Busky with a ground ball to second which Horace Clarke booted permitting the tying run to score.

Oakland won it in the eighth.

L. A. nips Phis in ninth inning

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Dave Lopes singled sharply into left field to score Tom Paciorek from third base with two out in the ninth inning Sunday and give the Los Angeles Dodgers a 2-1 come-from-behind victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Pinch-hitter Joe Ferguson hit Steve Carlton's pitch in the bottom of the eighth into the Dodger bullpen in left field for his 17th home run of the year to tie the score at 1-1.

Jim Brewer, the Dodgers' ace reliever, got his fifth victory against four defeats by working the ninth inning in place of Andy Messersmith, who went the first eight innings while allowing six hits. Carlton, last year's NL Cy Young Award winner, was tagged with his 14th defeat against 10 victories.

Carlton had a 1-0 lead and a four-hitter through seven innings before Ferguson, Los Angeles' regular catcher sitting on the bench in favor of Steve Yeager, pinch-hit for Messersmith and drove the ball over the bullpen wall in left field.

Williams leads Birds past K.C.

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Earl Williams smashed a two-run homer and Tommy Davis lined a two-run triple, providing the Baltimore Orioles with a four-run third inning Sunday and a 10-6 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Jim Palmer, 16-6, scored his eighth straight victory but needed relief help from Grant Jackson and Bob Reynolds.

A total of 43,211 fans turned out in honor of Cash, and typically the Detroit first baseman went 0-4 on his day.

Perry raised his record to 11-10 and had a shutout into the ninth when Pat Kelly and Jerry Hairston singled home the White Sox' runs.

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Ocean liner sailings have diminished considerably in the wildly euphoric mood of just a couple of years ago, before bomb threats canceled firmly the marvelously holiday spirit of friends celebrating other friends' great luck in taking a liner to Europe.

No one sees friends off on a plane or train anymore except for an occasional family group weeping around a grandparent or uncle retiring to his native little town on a well-earned Old Age Pension.

Trains don't go much anywhere anymore and ships alone retain the traditional happiness attached to vacation leavetakings. But the Cunard Line last year in the wake of the phony IRA bomb scare which caused mid-Atlantic landings by parachutists and scuba divers around the Queen Elizabeth 2, was forced for security to ban the happy hysteria of letting friends aboard the QE2 for glad goodbyes.

That's certainly the only item of sadness modifying an evening sailing of this greatest luxury liner; a year ago we invited a dozen or more friends to come sip sailing-champagne, and they were barred at the Cunard Dock. We all were vastly disappointed, the frustration felt about as far as the Verazano Bridge as our disappointed visitors were cooling their disappointment at P.J. Clarke's.

This year the depths of disappointment were absent — we knew in front there would be no old style party aboard and had our own considerably muted celebration over a glass or three of bubbly and hoped the great old tradition would be returned next year.

There is considerable cachet to arriving at the Cunard Pier 84 in a chauffeur-piloted limousine; our version of that snooty elegance was to show up with our own uniformed chauffeur — the uniform clerical, consisting of a Roman collar about the Adam's Apple (will lady-libbers call their's an Eve's Apple?) of one Charles F.X. Dolan, S.J., the Jesuit priest virtually a member of our family: he baptized both our sprigs and said mass right in our living room on our 25th wedding anniversary.

There is serendipitous function in the Rev. Dolan at the wheel of our ship-headed caravan: like many tough old American professions, the docks of New York are staffed heavily with Irish and other Catholics who give more respect to a Roman collar than they would to the titled president of Cunard. Therefore the Rev. Chacha (our children called him that from their first spoken words) served more than a limousine-function; we were bowed promptly onto the dock instead of queuing up like the rest of the non-clerically chauffeured passengers; no prettier picture exists than the privileged class enjoying its privileges.

There is great satisfying contrast in the ability to afford taking a ship to Europe. It's the unsmug knowledge that you couldn't enjoy such certainly sheer luxury as exists in so few moments of modern life, a QE2 trip to Europe one of the few in an increasingly regimented, restricted and cheapened modern civilization. There is comfort for the born-rich, of course; but the satisfaction of the Depression Kid, whose travel usually depended on thumbing a ride, in boarding the QE2 is close to sublime.

We remember thumbing a ride to New York from Buffalo for a 30s Notre Dame-Army game at Yankee Stadium, arriving to check in at the Railroad YMCA (we got a rate, being the son of a railroad conductor) for about 50 cents a day. We bought standing room tickets at $2 for the Stadium, all but froze our feet and enjoyed every minute of it. We had contrast there — more than 30 years later we traveled to Shea Stadium for a Notre-Dame-Army game aboard the yacht of a friend, the late Bruce Forbes whose Forbes Magazine is one of the richer family-owned publications. We had cocktails and dinner enroute aboard Bruce's yacht the Highlander (the Forbeses are proudly dedicated Scotsmen all), tied up at the marina only a few steps from Shea Stadium, saw the game in a heated box protected from the chill by glass partitions and radiant overhead heating, lost a small bet — on Notre Dame, of course, being a lifelong subway alumnus — to Deadeye Henry of the industrial hierarchy (AVCO) and didn't mind it at all; the full cost of our football weekend 30 years earlier was about the precise size of that bet: $25.

Once we matched teenage poverty-tales with Morton Downey, and as we detailed our sleeping on floors, going without meals for days, the hopeless insufficiency of our clothes and other proof of prolonged but transient humble beginnings, Mrs. Downey turned to our equally well-brought-up bride and commented: "Get them! The snobbery of poverty!"

She was right; there is no snobbery as virulent as the pride of getting out of the underprivileged class. And it was just that candid sense of Making It as we watched our Vuittons being loaded onto the QE2 by longshoremen directed by our old pier-boss dock-friends Eddie Foley and Ray Skarica. The Snobbery of Poverty indeed.

Apart from the wildly uninhibited celebration of past sailings, the mood of the boarding passengers was holiday, the boarding quick, checking of passenger courteously thorough: you get the same electronic twice-over as airline passengers in the Hijack Age — handbags, shoulderbags and all carried-on appurtenances are checked thoroughly. No bombs found, just the usual explosion of delighted spirits heading onto the most luxurious transportation still existing. No friends permitted aboard, not even the Rev. Chacha Dolan, though the dock bosses and some Cunard executives knew him. The rule was simple — no exceptions. And no balloons, horns, favors, confetti; the high spirits were muted, but happy anyway; as Bobby Hackett's trumpet is muted, and still a happy sound.

Phase IV confuses textile industry — but prices still rise

By STANLEY H. SLOM
Dow Jones-Ottaway News
NEW YORK — In the uncertain world of Phase 4, no one sector of American industry seems more confused than the textile industry.

The principal reason: manufacturers say the regulations aren't clear concerning the computation of their costs — and such computations, of course, are necessary to arrive at prices. But amid the murkiness, there is one major certainty: consumers will be paying more this fall for shirts, for draperies, for towels — indeed, for just about everything made from fabrics.

It is as simple as the law of supply and demand. As affluence has increased outside the U. S., American textile makers and producers of the raw commodities that go into textiles have been besieged by orders from countries willing and able to pay premium prices.

Japan and West Germany, for example, are snapping up wool and cotton. And these commodity exports, of course, mean that there is less wool and cotton available to satisfy domestic demand — a sure ingredient of higher prices.

But there are other factors. Private forecasters estimate flood-hampered cotton seedings at 13.1 million acres this year, compared with 14 million acres last year. Also, acreage allotments for cotton have been cut about 13 per cent this year. All of this has contributed to skyrocketing prices for the key grade of cotton — currently selling in Memphis for a record 61½ cents a pound, compared with 35 cents a year ago. (Futures for October 1973 are 68½ cents a pound.)

Over and above raw-material supply, traditional warm-weather absenteeism in textile mills has slowed production and has also prevented mills from adding a sixth working day or a third shift to meet demands. And the mills' costs — including shipping cartons, transportation, plant construction and increased rents — have gone up.

Government to rescue

None of this would have meant very much for consumer budgets if the Cost of Living Council hadn't come to the rescue of textile and apparel makers as it did last month. The council ruled that until the current price freeze ends, textile and apparel companies can charge prices above freeze ceilings on goods contracted before June 13 for shipment during the freeze. The council further said that clothing makers can use Phase 3 regulations to compute prices, in effect allowing charges substantially above freeze prices.

Since retailers can pass on such increases to consumers, it won't be long until the results of the council's ruling will be felt by shoppers. A few examples:

— A man can expect to pay $6 this fall for a shirt that sold for $5 in the spring.

— Curtains and draperies are expected to soon cost at least 10 per cent more than they did a few months ago.

— Men's underwear that sells for 93 cents today will sell for $1.05 in a month or so; men's suits that retailed for $100 last fall will command about $110 this fall.

The supply problem, in fact, has grown to the point that some textile goods may be unavailable at any price. In coming months, industry observers say, consumers will find less variety not only in men's dress shirts and worsted suits but also in brassieres and towels.

If the real stuff is unavailable, what about synthetics? The answer: a supply squeeze has also gripped the synthetic-fiber field as demand outpaces production capacity. Furthermore, there is a shortage of certain petrochemical raw materials — such as ethylene glycol — that has become so acute that polyester-fiber producers have had to curtail production.

The situation, from a shopper's standpoint, is encapsulated in the words of David Fuchs, president of Hampton Industries Inc., manufacturer of unbranded men's, boys' and women's clothes.

Says Fuchs: "A short-sleeved shirt next spring will cost the same as a long-sleeved one last fall."

It's as simple as that.
